Foreword

ISO (the International Organization for Standardization) is a worldwide federation of national standards bodies (ISO member bodies). The work of preparing International Standards is normally carried out through ISO technical committees. Each member body interested in a subject for which a technical committee has been established has the right to be represented on that committee. International organizations, governmental and non-governmental, in liaison with ISO, also take part in the work. ISO collaborates closely with the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC) on all matters of electrotechnical standardization.

International Standards are drafted in accordance with the rules given in the ISO/IEC Directives, Part 3.

Draft International Standards adopted by the technical committees are circulated to the member bodies for voting. Publication as an International Standard requires approval by at least 75 % of the member bodies casting a vote.

Attention is drawn to the possibility that some of the elements of this International Standard may be the subject of patent rights. ISO shall not be held responsible for identifying any or all such patent rights.

International Standard ISO 15605 was prepared by Technical Committee ISO/TC 61, Plastics, Subcommittee SC 11, Products.

Introduction

Correct sampling is a skilled operation and the various procedures should be carried out with great care by samplers having the required knowledge and experience. The general instructions in this International Standard are intended to supplement this knowledge and experience and are applicable to most situations; however, some products require special sampling precautions not specified in this International Standard and therefore special vigilance is needed on the part of samplers to take note of unusual characteristics exhibited by the products. It is also essential that samplers observe special precautions in accordance with manufacturers' instructions and safety regulations.
