CEN/TS 16765:2025(E)

Introduction

Protection of the environment is a key political issue in Europe and internationally.

It is recommended that manufacturers develop an environmental management policy. For guidance see the EN ISO 14000 (series).

Climate change is unequivocal and threatens the different regions in Europe in different ways. Climate change adaptation is a field which is constantly evolving. It should therefore be noted that this document is based on the best available knowledge. The dynamic nature of climate change strengthens the need to be considered in the standard development or revision process at a very early stage.

This document takes into consideration the content of CEN Guide 4 and CEN/CLC Guide 32.

It has been assumed in the drafting of this document that the execution of its provisions is entrusted to appropriately qualified and experienced people.

Some of the environmental aspects also have an implication for occupational health and safety.
