Introduction

European draft standards on safety and performance requirements for items of cookware are currently under study. These drafts are related to cookware for use on top of a stove, cooker or hob, to cookware for use on induction plates, to ovenware and to cookware for microwave ovens.

In these drafts, it is required that cookware or their packaging be labelled with information on the types of heating source for which the products are suitable.

The aim of this European Standard is to establish symbols that should be used for this purpose.

Insofar as further symbols, related to aspects other than the suitability to the heating sources are used on cookware, these symbols should be harmonised with those specified in this European Standard.
